GOOD CAUSE REASONS FOR NOT COOPERATING WITH EMPLOYMENT SERVICES

1. You were not able to find proper child care.
2. The job you had was not "suitable" for one of the following reasons:
   - You were not physically or mentally able to do the job.
   - The job paid less than minimum wage.
   - The job violated health and safety standards.
   - You were subjected to discrimination on the job.
3. You are ill or injured.
4. A family member in your home is ill and needs you to care for them. This keeps you from complying.
5. You are unable to find the transportation you need.
6. You are in an emergency situation that prevents you from complying with your Employment Plan.
7. The activities in your Employment Plan conflict with a court proceeding. Or you are required to attend a meeting related to a juvenile court matter that conflicts with the activities in your plan.
8. You were scheduled to attend a mandatory DWP meeting during a time that conflicts with a court proceeding or a meeting related to a juvenile court matter.
9. You are already participating in acceptable work activities.
10. The activities identified in the Employment Plan are not available.
11. You are willing to accept a suitable job, but none have been made available to you.
12. There are other reasons (that can be verified) which are beyond your control, and the reasons keep you from complying.
13. An activity in your Employment Plan conflicts with your work schedule.

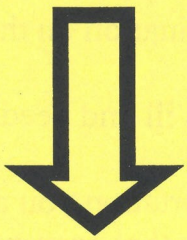
DWP Disqualification

What happens when you do not cooperate with employment services?



If you do not cooperate with your employment plan or child support requirements, your case will be closed. You are not eligible for any other cash programs until you come back into compliance or until your four months of DWP ends. Contact your job counselor or financial team if you have a good reason for not following the rules.
