

Helping TANF Administrators and State Officials Find Evidence on Employment Programs. The Pathways to Work Evidence Clearinghouse is a comprehensive, transparent, and systematic assessment of the effectiveness of interventions designed to help job seekers with low incomes succeed in the labor market. The Pathways Clearinghouse website can help practitioners and policymakers connect to the best available evidence on interventions that increase earnings and employment for jobs seekers with low incomes. The site includes resources, tools, and tips for using the Pathways Clearinghouse to find interventions supported by evidence. The Pathways Clearinghouse was developed by the Office of Planning, Research, and Evaluation in the Administration for Children and Families in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. More information - including a video recording of a recent webinar in which experts who work with state officials and other decision makers discussed the role the website can play in making evidence-informed decisions about employment policies and programs - is available here.
