Online Work Readiness Assessment (OWRA) Tool

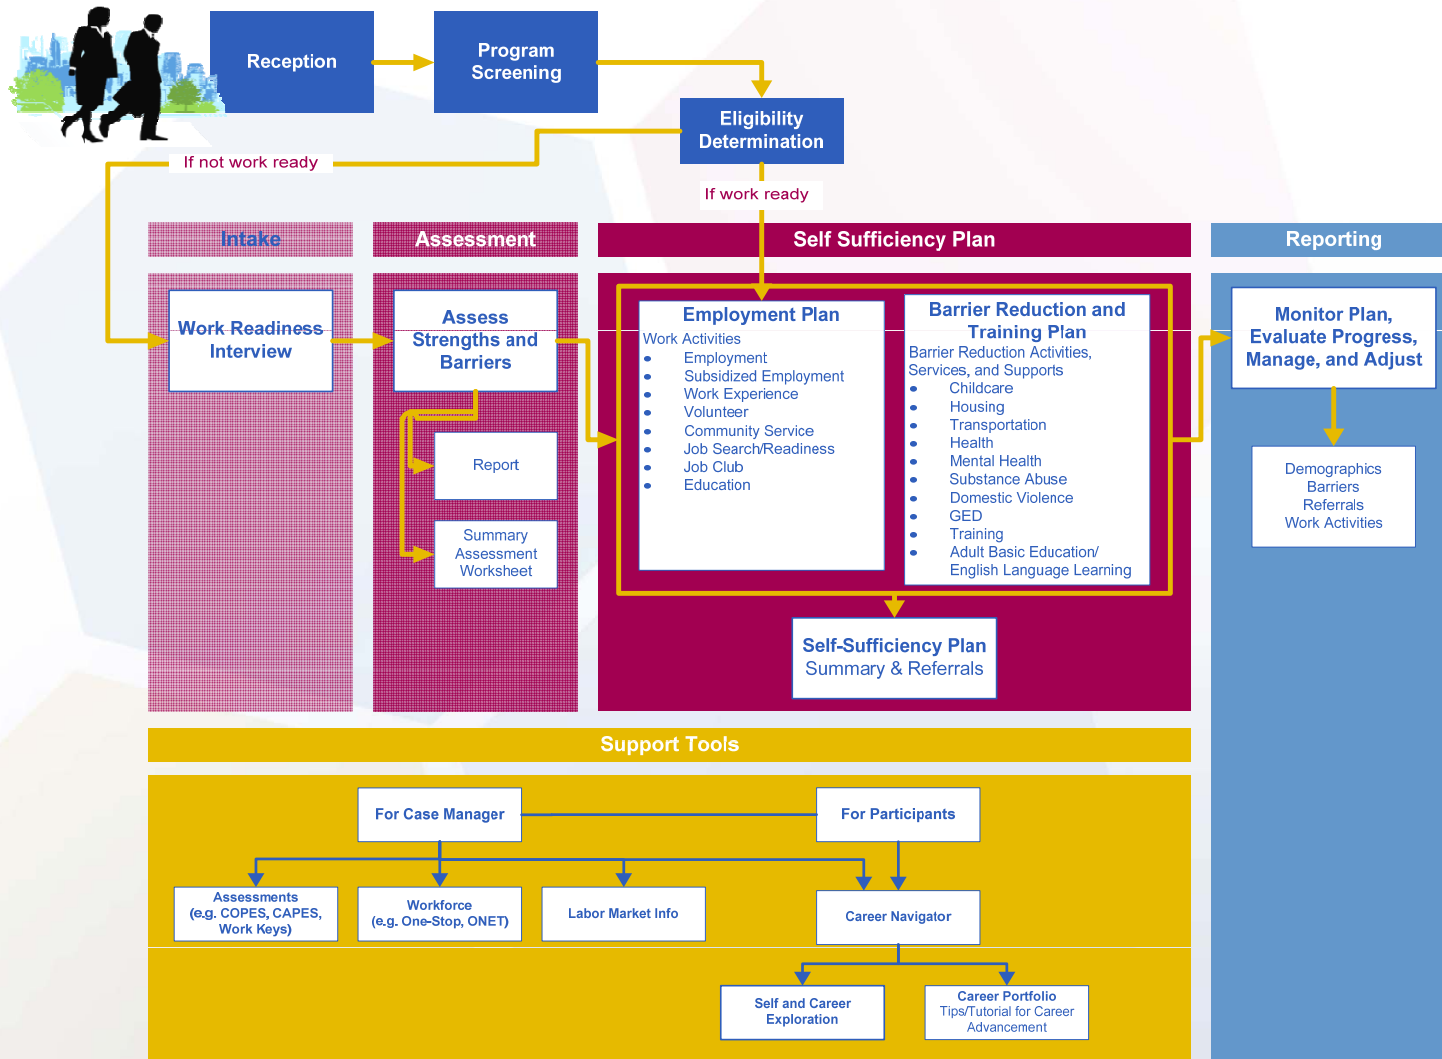

Web-based suite of resources, tools, assessments and guidelines that will help TANF agency staff engage participants in work-focused activities leading to long-term self-sufficiency

Evidence-Based Research and Practice

- Importance of quickly identifying and addressing personal, family, logistical and community challenges and barriers
- Increased need for range of assessment and service strategies that can help uncover barriers
- Differentiation between “screening” and “assessment”

For Participants

The For Participants section of the Work Readiness Resource is intended to help TANF participants explore and learn about their interests, abilities, and skills. There are three levels of activities, information, and links for TANF participants to explore. In all three levels, TANF participants can take advantage of the Takeaways, which are activities and fact sheets for them to use to take down information or learn about themselves.

For Case Managers

The For Case Managers section is created for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) caseworkers, job developers, Job Club instructors, and any other person that works with TANF participants. This section provides an interactive hub of information, resources, and tools so that you can help your TANF participants become self-sufficient.

Case managers will learn about the world of workforce development and labor market information lingo, language, and available resources. In addition to labor market information and workforce development resources available to you, this section also explores education and training opportunities, options, and resources available to help work with TANF participants in putting together a self-sufficiency

Using Appropriate Assessments to Determine Work and Career Readiness

In addition to using OWRA Modules 1 and 2 to assess the strengths and barriers of each TANF participant, there are a number of additional factors that need to be considered before determining that someone is work ready.

There are a number of assessments that can be used to help the caseworker determine if there is additional training or education needed for a participant to be work ready. There are also a number of career exploration assessments to navigate and it can be hard to understand when these assessments can and should be used.

The next few pages discuss some of the various assessments that can be used to determine if there is additional education and training needs. These pages are divided into five sections of assessments:

- Determining Literacy and Adult Basic Education (ABE) Needs
- Determining English Language Learning (ELL) Needs
- Determining Learning Disabilities and Work Styles
- Determining Soft Skills Training Needs
- Determining Abilities and Career Exploration Needs
- Additional Assessments

Example:

A participant may have a very low literacy level, may need some adult basic education, may speak English as a second language, or may need additional assessments to determine if there are functional work assignments or soft skills that need to be developed.

Overview of Career Pathways and Clusters

In Level Three, TANF participants learn more about career clusters and pathways.

What are Career Clusters?

- Career clusters organize education and training programs around sets of skills, abilities, and knowledge that are required by jobs and occupations.
- There are 16 career clusters that have diverse pathways with various jobs, education, and training, and knowledge and skills necessary to succeed. Depending on the career cluster there are various career pathways that are subcategories of the career cluster.
- For detailed information on all 16 career clusters and pathways including brochures, listing of knowledge and skills needed for specific clusters, and examples of occupations related to individual career clusters, please explore <http://www.careerclusters.org/16clusters.cfm>.

Career pathways are individual programs under Career Clusters. They organize the types of knowledge and education you need by specific occupations.

What are Career Pathways?

- Career pathways are individual programs organized under the Career pathways and the occupations identified within each, are grouped by the kind of education and training needed.
- For a listing of all the individual career pathways under each of the 16 career clusters, please visit: <http://www.careerclusters.org/list16clusters.php>

2009 Pilots

- Piloted:
 - February 1 – July 31, 2009
 - 16 sites in 5 States and the Quinault Indian Nation
- Kickoff Meeting with State/Tribal/county leadership mapping out business processes
- Customization of assessment for each State/Tribe
- On-site training (User Guide, Mock Interviews, On-site Job Coaching)
- 4-8 weeks of usage:
 - weekly check in calls, Virtual Help Desk with 1-800 number ongoing technical assistance and technical support
- Close-out Focus Groups:
 - Caseworkers and supervisors
 - State/Tribal/county leadership

- Comprehensive assessment – thorough questions with recommendations helped create work opportunities for participants
- Standardization of assessment – critical when population is transient in nature
- Consistency across caseworkers in terms of diagnosing untreated barriers among participants
- Effective roadmap providing detailed information to guide employment planning for participants

Lessons Learned – Caseworkers and Participants

- User-friendly
- Assisted caseworkers to think more holistically about participants’ desires, objectives, and strengths and barriers
- Helped identify “risk” characteristics resulting in higher number of referrals for mental health and domestic violence
- Encouraged dialogue with the participant which ensured participant engagement
- Generated more buy-in to recommendations among participants—resulting in participant success in assigned activity
